Partners

Prescribed Burn Program

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and the National Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) entered into a partnership dating back to 2008 as a result of having a mutual interest in executing prescribed burns at Mark Twain Lake. Prescribed burns are employed to control undesirable plant species and reduce density of field and vegetation while improving wildlife habitat. Both agencies share a commitment on responsible land stewardship and will partner on opportunities to educate communities, landowners, and groups on effective land management practices.
