Rambling River Display Extended

What: View the Rambling River fiber art display and discover how Missouri quilters are connected to the Mississippi River. The display is a series of small quilts forming one river that flows through a 22' compilation. The quilters were given only the dimensions of the panels and agreed upon the height of the river as it flows from piece to piece. Each section is the quilter's interpretation of what a river means to her.

Media have the opportunity to speak to quilters upon request.

When: Through March 26. The exhibit is available 7 days a week from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Who: The Rambling River Fiber Artists is made up of quilters from the St. Louis and Kansas City regions. Fifteen ladies from across Missouri worked on the project.

Why: The exhibit was brought to the museum to illustrate how individuals can "Rediscover your connection to the river!"

Where: The National Great Rivers Museum, #2 Lock and Dam Way, East Alton, IL 62024
