Feasibility (CAP Section 14)

Location: The project is located along the Silver Creek in O'Fallon, Illinois, approximately 25 miles east of St. Louis, Missouri.

Description: The O'Fallon Wastewater Treatment Plant (WWTP) is currently experiencing bank erosion along Silver Creek which is threatening the municipal wastewater treatment lagoon. The City of O'Fallon has requested assistance from the St. Louis District to evaluate bank protection options.

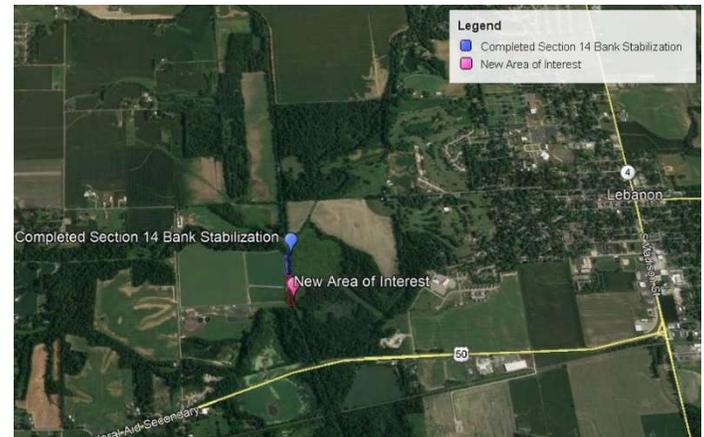

Status: Positive Federal Interest Determination was found and the project has moved into the Feasibility phase. The project will evaluate bank protection options to address flood and storm damages due to bank erosion along the Silver Creek threatening the municipal wastewater treatment lagoon.

Issues: Currently, approximately 1,000 linear feet of bank line along the Silver Creek has experienced erosion due to flood and storm damages.

Importance: With project and funding, bank protection would be implemented to protect public infrastructure that provides essential public services from flood and storm damages due to erosion.

Risk: Without project and funding, there is potential for further erosion to occur due to flood and storm damages.

Consequence: Without project and funding, potential further erosion could result in loss of public infrastructure.

Initial 500 feet of bank stabilization completed in 2004.
New area of concern is 1000-foot long.
